Day tour to the museums in Cairo from Sokhna port

You will be collected from Sokhna Port to the Egyptian Museum, certainly one of the most admired places in Egypt. This large museum is said to hold more papyri, coffins, and ornaments in its collection, making the collection even more unique. It has also set up the largest collection of all eras in this, even the Greek and Roman periods. The engineer who built this museum was awarded an international award in 1895, and it was given by the French engineer Marseille Dorgenon.

At the National Museum of Egyptian Civilization (NMEC):

Located in the very heart of the historical city of Fustat in old Cairo, the National Museum of Egyptian

Civilization is also carefully placed adjacent to the monuments of various civilizations. In this place, it has underscored Egypt's tolerance for religions and has become a means to remember the rich cultural history of the country as the cradle of civilization.

At the Abdeen Museum:

Abdeen Palace marked the long period in Egyptian history that was modern and contemporary, and it also represents the start of modern Cairo's emergence. The palace was designed while Khedive Ismail was commissioning the making of Cairo in the European way with many wide squares, wide streets, palaces, buildings, and bridges spanned across the Nile, and with plenty of green gardens and trees as well as vegetation using extremely rare plants.

Back to your boat at Sokhna Port after the tour.
